Housing Counts Data 2020

Despite economic disruptions caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, 2020 was a strong year for affordable housing development and preservation in the Twin Cities metro region. Saint Paul and suburban communities saw significant increases in new rental housing development compared to previous years. However, new rental production in Minneapolis declined for the first time since 2016; 139 affordable units were financed for development in 2020, compared to 576 in 2019. Annual preservation numbers continued to increase across the region. Minneapolis led the region in preserving the long-term affordability of 1,331 rental housing units, and the number of housing units preserved in Saint Paul more than doubled compared to 2019. This increase is largely due to 4D tax incentive programs that have been implemented in Minneapolis, Saint Paul, and several suburban cities.

About The Housing Counts Report Series

Each year since 2002, Family Housing Fund and HousingLink jointly publish data to provide housing leaders and stakeholders with a consistent means of tracking annual affordable housing production, preservation, and loss. The data set provide an annual accounting of affordable housing projects in Minneapolis, Saint Paul, and suburban communities, offering a systemic and consistent way of measuring progress to municipal and regional affordable housing goals.

When tracking new production and preservation of affordable housing, there are several points in time when a unit could be “counted.” HousingLink and Family Housing Fund have chosen to count units in the year their funding first closes. Only developments with public and/private capital funding with affordability obligations are listed.

To compare to previous years, view HousingLink’s visualization of the data over time.

Housing Counts Data 2019

2019 saw more affordable homes funded for new development than in 2018, marking another strong year for affordable housing investment. The past three years (2017, 2018, and 2019) have seen the highest numbers of newly built and preserved homes since Housing Counts reports began in 2002. Minneapolis and suburban communities continued to invest significantly in new rental home construction, with 1,241 new homes funded for development. Meanwhile, no new housing with affordability obligations was developed in Saint Paul. Notably, the number of affordable homes preserved has increased even from 2018's strong figures. This is likely due to 4d incentive programs in Minneapolis, Saint Paul, and some suburban communities. Minneapolis led the region in preservation with a total 1,047 homes preserved.

2018 Housing Counts

October 2019

Housing Counts Data 2018

2018 marked a strong year for affordable housing investment, with a total of 2,981 homes funded for new development or preservation across the region. While affordable rental production fell short of peak in 2017, last year was still the second-highest producing year since metro-wide Housing Counts reporting began in 2004. The City of Minneapolis and suburban communities experienced strong investment in both new rental home construction (1,323 units) and rental home preservation (1,630), both of which have increased steadily over time since the 2008 recession.

Suburban communities led in both rental preservation (858 units) and new rental production (710 units), while Minneapolis led in the development of new homeownership opportunities, creating 16 new affordable homes for buyers. Investment in preservation increased compared to 2017, due in part to the pilot launch of the City of Minneapolis' 4D Affordable Housing Incentive Program.

About The Housing Counts Report Series

Each year, Family Housing Fund and HousingLink jointly publish data to provide housing leaders and stakeholders with a consistent means of tracking annual affordable housing production, preservation, and loss. The data set provides an annual accounting of affordable housing projects in Minneapolis, Saint Paul, and suburban communities.

Some jurisdictions in the Twin Cities region have set numeric goals for the production and preservation of affordable housing, but before 2002, there was no systemic and consistent way of measuring progress and no historical record of results. To fill that gap, Family Housing Fund and HousingLink committed to compiling this data every year.

When tracking new production and preservation of affordable housing, there are several points in time when a unit could be “counted.” HousingLink and Family Housing Fund have chosen to count units in the year their funding first closes. Only developments with public and/or private capital funding with affordability obligations are listed.
